Editorial Welcome

ANIL SHARMA

It gives me immense pleasure to introduce the International Healthcare Research Journal as a publication platform for medical, dental and allied sciences. Writing from the Editorial desk in the Inaugural Issue of this journal is a privileged honour. Health has been said to be a basic human right. The world is heading towards the peak of development at a very high pace, but still lagging far behind the emerging and prevailing health problems. Although, this globe is not deprived of healthcare professionals, yet the burden of health related problems overweighs human life. The need of the hour is to encourage the health professionals to create and convert their ideas, thoughts and hard work into new research data and adopt critical thinking habits to confront our health problems. This journal encourages global research collaborations that would lead to joint publications with high international standards. I would like to comment that publications are not mere assets or something that make one's profile stronger, rather it is one's contribution to the never ending era of research in healthcare.

The journal is concerned with epidemiological studies, clinical research, preventive medicine and dentistry, health services research, health education, health promotion, health economics, quality of life, analysis of risk and quality assessment and welcomes all types of publications like Original Articles, Case Reports, Systematic Reviews and meta-analysis, Review Articles, Short Communications and Letter to the Editor.

Finally, I would like to thank my Entire Editorial and Advisory Committee, both national and international, for their invaluable advice, contributions and tireless efforts. It is with deep gratitude and humbleness that I wish to express my indebtedness to Dr. Nidhi Gupta and Dr. Sahil Thakar for their sagacious guidance and encouragement. This is a major milestone for us and I encourage all my colleagues in the health care sector to embrace and support this journal.
